In 2023, the number of passengers in passenger transport was the highest in the last four years and almost rose to pre-pandemic values

In 2023, the indicators of passenger transport reached the highest values in the last four years, the number of passengers and passenger kilometres grew at a double-digit rate. Freight transport ended the year in negative figures by almost 4%, the volumes of transported goods and performance were lower.

Passenger transport recorded a 9% increase in the number of passengers in December. Higher dynamics of passenger growth was recorded by road transport, by almost a tenth. In the long term, it is still the case that 90% of passengers in public transport travel on roads, by buses or other means of transport. In December, passenger transport performance, which also takes into account the length of the roads, was higher by 12.6% than last year.
